CANADIAN SENATE A NECESSITY

PRINCESS GETS $126,000 DAMAGES

OTTAWA—Evidence that the senate, in amending and rejecting bills, had saved Canada at least $103,450,000 was offered to the upper chamber last week by Senator Charles Murphy. He quoted Sir Richard Cartwright as saying that "the value of the senate is not only in what it does but in what the senate prevents other people from doing."

The long record of beneficial service of the senate in safeguarding and improving Canadian legislation, was narrated by Senator Murphy. Recently Senator A.D. Moffat had drawn the senate's attention to the fact that "the people of Canada have but a very vague and quite erroneous impression as to the responsibility of this honorable house with respect to government."

LONDON—Princess Irene Yusoufovna was awarded $125,000 damages in her libel suit against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Ltd., producers of the film "Rasputin and the Empress."

The verdict, one of the largest in the history of British libel cases, was received with amazement by the crowded courtroom on the trial, that climaxed in the sensation-filled story of the mad monk of the Russian court was written by the jury.

The princess, who had asked for $1,000,000 from the motion picture company, exclaimed she was "completely satisfied with the verdict."

The award followed a trial filled with sensational rivaling the story of Rasputin himself. Princess Irene announced, during the trial, that she intended to sue every theatre where the film has been exhibited throughout Great Britain and the United States.

It was claimed by the Princess that the character Natakha in the picture was "a deft agent for her and her character, caused for the producers maintained that the character was fictional."

ABERHART TO LAY-OFF DOUGLAS SYSTEM DUE TO CRITICISM

Will Await Coming of Major Douglas To Explain His Plan

William Aberhart, high school principal, evangelist and leading proponent in Alberta of the Douglas theory of social credit, has announced that he will resign his position as president of the Social Credit League in Calgary because of criticism by one faction of the movement in Toronto.

Mr. Aberhart declined to give details of the criticisms, saying only that he would step aside until the arrival of Major Douglas, originator of the system in Calgary. Efforts were under way to have this visit made possible, especially because it was desired to have Major Douglas appear before a special committee of the legislature which may be appointed to consider various plans of credit management.

OTTAWA—The bill to revise the Bank Act was sent to the Committee on Banking and Commerce by the Minister of Finance, Mr. Bennett, on Wednesday, March 7th, 1934.

After three hours of legal argument their lordships of the judicial committee of the Privy Council granted Mrs. McPherson's application for leave to appeal by Mrs. McPherson still before the Alberta courts stand over until the appeal before the Privy Council is determined.

WHAT ABOUT SOCIAL CREDIT, CANADA?

This series is an explanation of the Douglas Social Credit Plan. Mr. Williams (W.) a Social Credit advocate, is explaining the plan to his friend, Mr. Jones (J.). The scene is Mr. Williams' home, and the conversation takes place during an evening visit.

No. 8

W. "No, the banks do not own the financial credit which they lend. It is something which belongs to the community for it has no real value except what it derives from the Real Credit of the community."

J. "Say that again—slowly."

W. "I suppose it is the two terms 'Financial Credit and Real Credit' that are confusing to you."

J. "Yes, what do you mean when you talk real credit?"

W. "Not the first time we are in the borders of the land we are in. Credit from now on you will be running into original ideas so don't let anything pass that looks doubtful."

Real Credit has been defined as the "belief in the capacity of society with all its resources to deliver goods and services at a certain rate. Applying that to an individual unit it simply means that you look at a factory, its mechanical equipment, its personnel, its accessibility to raw materials, etc., and from these factors you can estimate the capacity of that plant to turn out its product. Now, in this case you are dealing with Real Wealth for I suppose that our Real Wealth consists of goods and services and that money in any form is not wealth. This other thing which I called Financial Credit is something quite different. It is only the shadow of the real thing and it has no value in itself. At its best it would give a true image of this real credit."

I explained. Today I hear no relation to the community's Real Credit.

"Financial Credit may be defined as the belief in the capacity of the person or the community credited to deliver money, when, when, and as required. That means that when a banker makes a loan he has faith in the ability of the borrower to repay that loan at the time specified. It means that when a person takes a loan from a municipality the person believes that at the time for the retirement of the bond he will receive his original amount of money, and, of course, in addition he expects to be receiving interest in the meantime according to the contract."

"Do you see how in both cases credit is just what the word means—a belief in certain contingencies. In the

MRS. McPHERSON ALLOWED TO APPEAL

LONDON—Mrs. Cora Lillian McPherson, of Edmonton, won the right to appeal to the privy council against the decision of Alberta courts to grant her husband, Hon. O.L. McPherson, minister of public works in the Alberta government.

After three hours of legal argument their lordships of the judicial committee of the Privy Council granted Mrs. McPherson's application for leave to appeal by Mrs. McPherson still before the Alberta courts stand over until the appeal before the Privy Council is determined.

Mrs. McPherson asked leave to appeal on the grounds the decree was granted her husband by Mr. Justice Tweedie of the Alberta Supreme court after a private hearing, namely in the judge's library.

"The right honorable gentleman is quite right," Mr. Garland agreed, "but he knows full well that they don't go to the judge's library."

"Quite the opposite," Mr. Bennett retorted. "They control the committee's hand, but in the case of others they often do not attend the director's meetings."

"I would like to know how much of the committee's work was done by the committee itself?"

"Read the Bank of Canada Act," replied the Prime Minister.

"That was another question," Mr. Garland replied.

EXPENDITURE ON HUDSON ROUTE IS ENDED

Dr. R.J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, is quoted as telling the House of Commons at Ottawa that with the expenditure of $550,000 in the Commons, the Hudson Bay route will be declared finished. Total cost of the route will be approximately $15,000,000.

Dr. Manion said that with the expenditure of $550,000 in the Commons, the Hudson Bay route will be declared finished. Total cost of the route will be approximately $15,000,000.

He believed the bill deficit might be as low as $100,000 this year.

"BANJO DADDY" COMING TO CARBON ON SAT. MARCH 17

N. A. GUYMON, known as "Banjo Daddy" and a well known musician in the province, will play at the Carbon in the Farmers' Exchange hall, Carbon, on Saturday night, March 17th.

Manly will credit this aged musician's visit to Carbon about a year ago at that time he was applauded for the class of entertainment he produced. This time the program has been improved with many added attractions.

nity system he has come to regard the system which he has permitted to operate as a machine, something to him which he can work for his own benefit. He is very much like a blind man who is riding on a horse, merely because he has no other means of locomotion.

"The man who is a banker is a man who operates a system that produces such havoc, may be, in private life, but in the public life it is generally men of the highest principle and rectitude but they stubbornly refuse to admit that they are but the trustees of the Real Wealth of the community."

Our inability to appreciate the effects of certain principles of the government coupled with the banker's refusal to administer the financial system except in accordance with the rules—these two things are responsible for the economic distress under which we suffer today."

CONDEMNATION OF WAR

We do solemnly warn the elderly diplomatists that though we are ready to sacrifice in 1934 as in 1914, we are not going to smash up the youth of other countries in another bloody war. We are not going to send our women into the front lines, make men who will smash other women's lovers and husbands and brothers into unrecognizable pulp. We are not going to drop disease germs on the heads of little children and call that fighting for peace. We are not going to let children starve until little children cry for food. We are not going to have sections of the Press manufacturing cheap stories of heroic sacrifices in order to make the British people hate their brothers in Europe. We will say rather to diplomatists: "We have tried the method of war because you said it would work and it doesn't work. We refuse to try it again."

Dr. Weatherhead in the British Weekly.

SEED FLAX IF GRASSHOPPERS ARE PREVALENT, SAYS MCGABE

Mr. McCabe, of the McCabe Grain Company, has been advising farmers throughout the west that wherever the grasshoppers are prevalent and have damaged the wheat crop, to re-sow with flax for the most profitable result.

A very careful investigation of commercial grains reveals the fact that the only grain which stands out in contrast to the condition of world-wide plus is flax. During the past few years the Canadian flax crop has been so small and of such minor importance, that little attention has been paid to it, and it is possible for this reason that no suggestions have been made heretofore in this regard. In 1929, Canada seeded more than 1,400,000 acres to flax; harvested a crop of 8,000,000 bushels. During the season 1929-31 two and a half million bushels of this was exported to the United States. In 1932 Canada's crop, from an acreage of over 1,000,000 acres, was a 1.4 million bushels, of which nearly 5,500,000 were exported to the United States.

That you, the farmer, imported 16 1/2 million bushels of flax, no of Canada supplied 33 per cent of these imports. In 1932 Canada seeded and harvested 1,400,000 acres of flax; harvested a crop of 8,000,000 bushels or 4 per cent of the world's supply. In a very few years, it is estimated that the world's supply of flax will be 10,000,000 bushels.

The School Of Experience

People learn their most important and valuable lessons in the school of experience. It is a school that opens at birth and closes with death, and there are no vacation periods. We are passing through some experience at all times, and we are imbibing knowledge, learning something as a result. It may be that, like lessons learned in school and from books, we may forget some of the lessons of experience, for a time at any rate; even more frequently we may ignore and neglect the lessons which experience has taught us; nevertheless they have left their imprint upon our minds and have influenced our lives for good or for evil.

It not infrequently happens that a sharp lesson is learned never to be forgotten from some one brief experience. Something enters our lives—it may be a great sorrow or a great joy—which then and there alters the whole course of our lives. On the other hand, it is often the case that in order that a lesson may be effectively learned, the experience which is teaching it may be greatly prolonged in order that it may be impressed upon us in the way that is necessary. And while individuals may learn a lesson from some experience very quickly, it is usually a much slower process for communities and nations to so learn and profit by experience.

Consider the present economic upheaval throughout the world, now continuing into its fifth or sixth year. Some people, no doubt, learned valuable lessons from it during the first twelve-month of its duration; others have learned as the months and years have gone by. Communities and nations have learned some lessons, and some have, of course, learned more and faster than others. All are still learning; learning perhaps a little more thoroughly now than they were two and three years ago. But it is quite evident that the nations have not yet grasped, or at any rate accepted, the great truths which the Great Depression has been teaching more than they grasped, or accepted, the great truths which the Great War should have impressed upon all mankind.

Possibly it is because man has not yet learned the lessons, or at least accepted the teachings of the existing depressed economic state, that the depression is so greatly prolonged and still continues. There are certain lessons which the nations of mankind must learn, and not only learn but put their learning and knowledge into practical effect, before the depression will be overcome. The longer the depression continues the more forcibly it is teaching those lessons. They are lessons being learned through a bitter experience, but it is the stupidity and unwillingness of man to learn its obvious lessons that is prolonging that bitter experience.

The four years of death, horror, suffering and destruction of the Great War, together with its aftermath of trouble and losses, of which the present chaotic economic and financial situation is a part, have not taught the nations the utility of war. Surely they appreciate the teachings of the Great War and its outcome, but they absolutely will not take the lesson to themselves, with the result that the world is trembling today on the very brink of another terrible war.

But while the nations may thus be much slower than individuals to learn lessons they should learn and profit by in all countries are learning and in time their thoughts and their influence will direct the nations. It is, of course, much more difficult to bring a whole group or nation to accept a great truth as the result of experience than it is to get a few individuals to accept it. Individuals are now in ever increasing numbers learning valuable lessons as a result of the experiences through which they are passing—lessons which will not be easily forgotten but which will have their impress on several generations to come. It will take time to translate their views into community and national life and action. That evolutionary process, nevertheless, is under way.

It is inevitable, too, that out of the experience of a transition period such as the present many new ideas and theories will be advanced in all sincerity and seriousness as the solution of existing ills. It has always been so in all transition periods in the world's history, and it will probably continue to be so at all times of marked change. The mental processes of people are quickened by the experiences through which they are passing, but in numerous cases this merely results in the adoption of faddist or extreme ideas, and these, advanced as cure-alls for existing ills, are, generally speaking, mutually destructive to the use of the other.

Clear thinking, therefore, is one of the most essential requirements in times like the present. Our experiences should teach us not to act hastily. They should teach us to take the greatest care in making decisions, and they should teach us to go on guard against committing others and equally great mistakes under the influence of a great depression. It is never wiser to reach definite and far-reaching decisions beyond recall when we are either on the mountain peak or at the bottom of the deep valleys.

In a word, in the school of experience we should learn that it is most important, vitally so, that we order and control our thinking powers, and apply them to the practical problems at hand in full realization of the fact that while there is no short cut to betterment and perfection, betterment can be obtained by practical, united effort, while what now may be regarded as ideal will, if and when realized, prove to be but a stepping stone to a still nobler ideal.

Marvels of the Human Eye

By F. M. CROWE, Optometrist-Optician, Calgary

THE EYE BY F. M. CROWE
SIGHT SPECIALIST, CALGARY

NO. 3—SOME OF THE PARTS AND THEIR USES

The Choroid is the second or pigment layer and is composed principally of blood vessels for the nourishment of the eye, this pigment coloring acting as a protection against excessive light which might otherwise affect the sensitive Retina. People who lack sufficient pigment are much troubled by "glare." An Albino is a person devoid of pigment. The Choroid layer lies between the Sclerotic and the Retina, all three being closely attached.

The Crystalline Lens (hereafter referred to as the Lens) hanging vertically behind the pupil is transparent, elastic and even when in a state of rest, very convex in shape and is capable of assuming still greater convexity. This characteristic is known as "Accommodation" which is most important because it is this property which enables us to see at different distances. Accommodative power is at its height at the age of twelve and steadily diminishes as we grow older. At the age of about 40 years the average person has lost so much of the Accommodative power that he is unable to focus on the reading distance although vision may be perfect farther off at any time. Hence the necessity for wearing glasses for close work after middle life is due to natural change common to man. The Lens is made up of many layers as is an onion which accounts for its elasticity when acted upon by Ciliary muscles which are attached to the outside edge of the Capsule which surrounds the Lens. Sometimes the Lens becomes hard, cloudy and opaque and in this condition it is known as a Cataract. Lens or Cataract induced by various causes such as Bright's Disease, Syphilis, extreme old age and occupations requiring excessive heat and light. Contrary to a common belief, Cataracts never grow on the outside of the eyeball. So much misunderstanding exists regarding cataracts that the matter will be discussed fully in a future article. The Retina is the inner lining and the most delicate, sensitive and important part of the eye. It is really a spreading out of the Optic Nerve which connects the eye with the brain where seeing is actually accomplished. Although as thin as tissue paper, the Retina is composed of many layers each having its special function. The mysterious creation of the Retina is, generally speaking, a sealed book, very sensitive to light impression, and may be likened to the plate on a camera. All objects are focused on the retina upside down and backward as we do because our brains have so interpreted them from infancy.

Exhibition Is Unusual

Many Interesting Exploration Exhibits Being Shown in London

The polar exhibition opened recently by the Royal United Service Institution in London is attracting many visitors for the exhibits include exploration relics from the days of Frobenius and Cook to those of Scott and Shackleton. Among them is the camera which took the photographs of the south pole. Amundsen's flag and reckoning which told Scott that he had been forestalled, and the Union Jack which was hoisted at the pole. Another exhibit is the last stock of food carried by Scott and his companions, including the carry powder which Scott found gave him indignation.

Majority Would Not Work

New York city authorities the other day began an experiment to see just what percentage of street beggars are really "deserving cases." They arrested 63 panhandlers on the streets, investigated them, and offered jobs to those who wanted them. Seven of the 63 were thought to get the jobs. The other 56 being men who preferred begging to working, immediately were sent to jail.

Dominion Drama Festival

Native Flowers:

Second Festival To Be Held In The

Little Theatre, Ottawa

The second Dominion Drama Festival will be held in the Little Theatre, Ottawa, in the last week of April, when teams from all over the country will present plays in competition for the trophy presented by His Excellency, the Earl of Beaulieu, governor general of Canada. During the weeks prior to the festival, elimination contests are being held throughout Canada. Rupert Harvey, a distinguished English actor who was the adjudicator at the final competition in Ottawa last year is travelling across the Dominion acting as judge in the various eliminations.

Preliminary competitions are being held at Halifax, Saint John, Quebec, Halifax, Ottawa, Kingston, Toronto, London, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton, Vancouver and other places. In many instances it has been found necessary, so great is the interest aroused to have eliminations prior even to those upon which Mr. Harvey will adjudicate.

From about 120 entrants it will be necessary for the adjudicator to select representatives of all the provinces to compete in the final competition at Ottawa. It is probable that the central committee of the festival will issue sufficient invitations to make a full week of performances in Ottawa.

J. T. Grein, one of the most distinguished figures in the English theatre and a well-known London critic, has been secured as the adjudicator at the final competition.

The stimulus which has been given to the community drama by the inauguration of the festival by His Excellency, the Governor General of Canada, has exceeded the highest hopes. In almost every instance, and despite the difficulty of the times, the older organizations have largely increased memberships and here, there and everywhere new groups are being formed.

Favors Mild Inflation

Adoption of a modified system of codes similar to that used in the United States, mild inflation, a measure of commodity prices, state control of business from a modifying and regulating point of view, and strict control to an economic state of property were advocated by Premier Brownlee in addressing a banquet of the Alberta provincial board of the Retail Merchants' Association.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla's guests with impetuosity. When the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the party, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Avis is stunned and Camilla's mother likewise. Camilla decides that she must leave the home of her adopted parents immediately and go to live with Rose, her sister, who is a clerk in a business house. They decide to take an apartment. Bowman and Weeks, an advertising agency, where Camilla has submitted some of her work, send for her and tell her they have a new account which requires unusual treatment of juvenile art. To Camilla's surprise she learns that the account is that of her foster father's company, which has decided on an extensive campaign to bolster his struggling business. After a conference with Mr. Bowman, Camilla decides to attempt the work. With ideas running riot in her head she goes home and spends the night sketching. In the morning, armed with her samples she sets out for the agency. The critics were enthusiastic about her work, and Mr. Weeks offers her a salary of $50.00 a week to start and a prospect of having it doubled. She goes to keep a dinner engagement with Peter.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXXII.

Peter detected her electrified manner the moment he saw her, and thought he never had seen Camilla so lovely. He took both her hands in his gently, and poured his love and adoration into her eyes with his gaze. "Camilla, I can't endure this secret agony of living without you any longer."

"Even the agony is sweet!" she asked.
"Yes, because I live every hour in the anticipation of seeing you again," she smiled into his eyes, happily.
"Then our plan is a huge success. That is just the way I wanted it to be. Don't you see, dear, if I were with you always, there would be no sweet agony of anticipation?"

that would be tragic—very tragic for us. Half of the joy of life is anticipation."

He sighed with resignation. "Why do I argue with you about coming to me when I know I can't take care of you?"

"We're not going to argue about it, Peter. That's all settled. Besides, to-night is a very special celebration. I can't wait another minute to tell you my secret, so let's go in and sit down where we can talk. Do you suppose we can get the same table we had on our wedding night? This occasion is almost as important."

"It must be important, if it makes you so beautiful." His eyes did not leave her face, as he tucked her hand into his arm and they entered through the gracious doorway of Charm Cottage again.

Camilla glanced up from the menu delightedly. "Here is the same special menu we had for our wedding dinner, Peter."

"Then that's what we're having, okay?"

"It could be better," he said to the hovering waitress. "Now tell me," he folded his arms on the table and faced Camilla eagerly. "You have a position?"

"Oh, yes, but that isn't the best part of it," she exclaimed. "Let me begin at the very first and tell you everything!"

He laughed agreeably. "Suspense, thrill and all. It promises to be dramatic."

It was he, he admitted when she had finished. His heart swelled with pride for her success and ached a little with regret—not because he envied her, but because she was so exquisite and precious that he wanted to claim his right to take care of her and spare her all the sorrid demands and sacrifices which even so promising a future involved.

He knew that this sudden achievement flooded the whole world with a new light for her, like the bright, colored spotlights on the stage enhance soiled costumes, worn property and faulty makeup.

She hesitated, and then he saw her victory there is some defeat, for every joy some disappointment and heartache, for every task achieved endless hours of toil and anxiety. He knew that Camilla would see these challenges gallantly, of course. But he wished that he might spare her any of the disillusion and could sort out for her only the sparkling gleams of triumph, leaving her the bitter disappointment of synthetic substitutes which prevailed their majority in everything that he belonged to life.

Camilla deserved to be treasured like a precious jewel, herself, yet she belonged to him and he could not lift a finger to protect her from the slightest need or anxiety. Rather, he had added to these. A fierce determination that he might spare her his happiness. He would give his soul to keep her happy like that, always, he thought.

Mr. Hoyt accepted the news of Camilla's position and her departure from her home with resigned resignation. He had not gained while he lived, but to her way of thinking, Camilla would live to see the day when she would regret his determination to be independent and master of her own destiny.

In Mrs. Hoyt's past experience, youth profited by the wisdom of its elders or repaid the consequences of its folly. But hers was a mind that dwelt in the past in ancestral, social registers, inherited fortunes and blue-blooded conceptions.

Her mind obstinately denied what her eyes beheld; proud man's indignities and supported by plain words, the rapid rise of a social order which recognized ability above class, established fortune by earning by the hour while new ones of magic-beanstalk growth replaced them, life that loved and laughed and snapped its fingers at smug convention.

She had been trying to fit a product of this modern age into the pattern of two generations before. No wonder she had failed to accomplish her purpose. Strange, that she should selected this child of foreign parentage to replace those denied her. Just another inconsistency of human existence, that the beautiful little child had appealed so strongly to her mother's heart.

"I hope you won't think I am ungrateful if I leave you before the end of the summer?" Camilla inquired anxiously, after she had listened with calm patience to her foster mother's surprised comments upon her new position.

"But I don't see why you should. If you have to work in an office all day, it would be much easier for you to stay here until you are adjusted. For that matter, you need not leave here at all this year. We'd really like to have you with us, even if you are working for yourself." Her complexion was offered with more willingness than she would have admitted to herself.

"That's very kind of you, but I prefer to do all the adjusting now and have it over with. I really could not feel as if I were independent so long as I lived here with you, in such circumstances as my salary could afford me. Besides, Rose needs me for awhile. I believe we can do for each other while I am waiting for Peter to become established."

Mrs. Hoyt sighed heavily. "I don't mind that, but never will a man has to have more than ambition to succeed, and Peter's opportunities are so limited, I don't know why."

"Please, let me not go over all that again," Camilla entreated. "I know why I married Peter, and I'd marry him again, even if I thought he had no chance. But he has. He does have a chance, but he has talent, which will win out sooner or later."

Mrs. Hoyt's grievous eyes still accused her gravely when she proposed her tolerant acceptance of the situation. "Just where do you propose to live, Camilla. I hope you will consent to my coming with you for most of your life." Already, she was reaching out tentacles into Camilla's future life, in an attempt to order it according to her desires, as she had done in the past.

"I can't very well consider anything but my own future, even here, and Rose's salary," she protested. "After all—I'm sorry—but it was you who changed my position from that of a hoy, even before I became Camilla Anson. That is what I shall have to be—a working girl and the wife of a sculptor."

"But that's an impossible location," objected the horrified Mrs. Hoyt.

"Why, no, impossible?"

"Why—so very common and unimportant. How could you endure living in such surroundings?"

"I don't expect to gratify my beauty-loving eyes for awhile. If I have a clean room in an agreeable neighbourhood, it will do until we can afford better. That may be even sooner than we hope," she added optimistically, pulling a wide-eyed stare from her mother's black curls and tucking in the curious looks that persisted in peeping curiously into her face and shining eyes. "But I must hurry along and do just such a place to-day, so we can get settled tomorrow, rest Sunday and be ready to work on Monday. I'll see you at dinner."

Plaint Of Western Australia

Petition Parliament For Right To Secede From Commonwealth

Unique in history of the British Empire will be the petition to the King and imperial parliament setting forth the case for secession of the state of Western Australia from the Australian commonwealth.

This petition is now being considered and prepared for submission to the legislature of Western Australia. It follows the state-wide referendum of nearly a year ago when the voters registered a majority of almost two to one in favor of secession.

A special secession committee is also preparing a 300-word report on the question. The petition, when approved by the state legislature, will be forwarded to His Majesty and to the house of lords and house of commons in London.

Western Australia, with a population of 440,000 and area of 97,000 square miles, ascribes its acute financial difficulties to disabilities under the federal constitution. The state's desire for secession is increased by her geographical position, separated she is from others parts of the commonwealth by a thousand miles of desert.

Little Help For This Week

"I will be glad and rejoice in Thy mercy, for Thou hast considered my trouble. Thou has known my soul in adversity."—Psalm 31:7.

All by His Thine is ordered, chosen, planned, that fits my daily cup. Thy hand Prescribes for ill none else can understand; And all is known to A. K. Newton.

God knows us through and through. Not the most secret thought we hide from ourselves is hidden from Him. As then we know ourselves through and through we come to see ourselves as God sees us, and then we can catch some little glimpse of His designs with us, how each ordering of His providence, each checking of our desires, each failure of our hopes is just fitted for us, and for something in our own spiritual state which others know not of, and of which till then we knew not. Till we come to this knowledge we must take all in faith, believing, although we know not, the goodness of God towards us. We know ourselves thus far know God. E. B. Pusey.

Let Us Do Your Printing?

All business houses need more or less printed matter, all of which is within the possibilities of the local printer. Yet how prone many are to pass up the home printer and let the orders go to city offices which have no interest whatever in rural communities except to get printing orders and the cash to pay for them. Business men, remember that the home paper is constantly promoting the interests of the home community and you owe it to yourself and your local paper to back up these efforts by at least hav-
